A Message From the CEO

Strike Up The Band

by John Hawkins,
President and CEO, The Club

We have a piano at my house. I like tinkering on it, but more than that, I like the idea that homes should be creative places. So I was really looking forward to hanging with the Los Angeles Police Emerald Society Pipes and Drums band in early February, in producing this month's cover story to coincide with St. Patrick's Day. (Big thanks to Officer Cliff Armas, LAPD, for setting us up.)

I'd seen and heard the band many times before, mostly in City parades that either still exist or that have regrettably bitten the dust. (We've covered them in Alive!) I always stopped what I was doing and listened to the piping as the band marched past, and I was glad that City employees and Retirees were making it happen.

So in early February, when the Alive! editorial team visited the band to learn all about them, the first thing I noticed when they started rehearsing outside was ... whoa, are those pipes loud! But then I thought, how awesome that they are loud ... and proud!

There's a lot more to it than you might think. Sgt. II Michael Apodaca, Retired, LAPD, the band's president; and Det. Supervisor Scott Walton, LAPD, 28 years of City service, the band's co-founder; explained how the band worked, how it used to be for pay only, and how the challenge is keeping it going, much less building up the numbers to better compete in national competitions.

What I like even more than their creativity is their volunteerism and service -- they don't charge for their appearances (donations are accepted). The band, after all, is a police band, although not all members are officers, and it supports police activities whenever it can. Families of fallen officers can hardly afford to pay bagpipers, but the LA Emerald Society band will never refuse a request because of that. They will do everything they can to be there. In fact, during our several visits with the band, we could never get a group shot of all of the players together because someone was away playing at a police funeral. (And they had just returned from Utah after playing a police funeral there). Most of those substantial costs come out of their own pocket. They make music because they love it, but there's so much more to this band than a hobby. At the end of the day, their time and money is all about proud and committed service to the police. I think that's awesome.

The LA Police Emerald Society Pipes and Drums Band can use your help. First, they need more players. You don't have to know how to play (they'll teach you), you just have to support the cause. Or you can donate (it's a 501(c)3 nonprofit). See the story for more ideas. Next time I see the band marching down the street and I applaud the music, I'm going to save some applause for their service, too. Thanks, ladies and gentlemen of the band, for what you do.

Speaking of creativity, don't forget to submit your entries for our annual grown-up coloring contest! We here at Alive! love the amazing entries our Club Members send in every year. Did you know that adult coloring is all the rage now? Well, it is; but remember that we were doing it a decade ago. So grab last month's issue for the entry form, and have fun. (The entry deadline is March 15.)

Let me send a quick thank-you to Antoinette Christovale, who recently retired from Finance; she was the Director. Antoinette worked with us on a number of Finance stories through the years, including the annual Finance Outstanding Service Awards honor event that we cover every fall. Congratulations on your career, Antoinette, and have a great retirement. It's nearly spring, and the weather is already warm. Get outside and enjoy all the family time you can.

See you next month!

—JOHN

Letters to the Editor

The Tale of the Tape: Club Deal Saves Money

I didn't believe it until I went to Office Depot for my first purchase after I linked my credit card with the Club. I saved $30.78 on my ink cartridge purchase – less than half price! Here's a picture of my receipt to prove it! I just wanted to thank you all at the Club for making this program available to us. I am going to Office Depot more often. I sure hope every Club Member is taking advantage of this because the savings are amazing.

– Morgan Gibson, DWP

Those Who Defend Our Nation Are Always Important to the Club

Hi there, I have never written in to Alive! before but I thought this time I should. I just wanted to say Semper Parati to Tonja Bellard's son, Pvt. 1st Class Jeremy Bellard. I saw his picture as one of the winners in the Picture Perfect contest – I felt a rush of pride as I saw him standing there so majestically on that mountaintop. And thank you to the Alive! staff for being bold and publishing pictures of those tasked with defending our country.

– Thomas Stempfire, former Marine, Public Works/Sanitation

Retirees Can Choose to Receive Alive! Digitally

I just found out that as an RLACEI Member I can opt for the electronic Alive! – what a great way to save some trees and save space in my mailbox! For those of you who don't know how to make that happen, it's super easy. Just send an email to retiree@ralacei.com and say you want to "opt for the electronic Alive!" Voila! It's that easy. Well that's it for me, stay sane my fellow retirees.

– Mary Rose Wilkens, Retired, Library

Nancy's Snap Judgment in Favor of Awesome 'Picture Perfect' Entries

Those pictures in the "Picture Perfect" pages of the newspaper are incredible. They look very professional and seem to all tell a story. It takes a certain skill to produce these images as they are in the moment of time they took them. I especially liked the one from Debora Fore, with the monk at the Melk Abbey. Simple, yet elegant. We are looking forward to seeing more in 2016.

– Nancy Jacobson, General Services

Feature Shows the Work of Building Great Map Collection

I very much enjoyed reading the feature story on the maps at the Library. Glen Creason is doing terrific work over there. It is wonderful to see that someone is dedicated to the preservation of them. I had no idea how painstaking it can be to collect and find these important documents. How great it is that the City's Library Dept. holds one of the nation's largest map collections. In our own backyard, no less!

– Terry Jennings, General Services

Art at LAX

New art exhibit explores a mythic city at Tom Bradley Intl. Terminal.

Airports, in partnership with Cultural Affairs, announces a new art installation by Los Angeles artist Deborah Aschheim in the new Tom Bradley International Terminal at Los Angeles International Airport (LAX) that focuses on how memory and place are experienced during travel.

Aschheim's site-specific installation titled Camelot contains large-scale, glowing white sculptures inspired by personal memory, architecture, and the constantly changing nature of cities. Featuring a mash-up of urban architecture from around the world, Aschheim created a "dreamscape" of intentionally modified, out-of-scale, hybridized, torn-down, or never-built buildings that give form to the imagined mental state of a disoriented international traveler. The artwork attempts to respond to the state of mind of passengers who are arriving after a long flight, possibly processing the sensations of multiple cities visited. The traveler is in a kind of limbo, a state of mind that the artist considers dreamlike and poetic. The installation is on view in the Customs Hallway, Arrivals Level for ticketed passengers through May 2016.

Camelot references how people remember or misremember places and buildings. Groupings of translucent white architectural structures lit with white LEDs form a luminous landscape to resonate with travelers' memories of different international cities. Material similar to what an architect may use to create a model of a building are used, in this instance, Coroplast corrugated plastic, but instead of creating a slick, perfect model, she prefers that her buildings have a handmade quality, thereby connecting with her memory of the building versus creating a perfect carbon copy of the building. To further lend a dreamlike quality to the sculptures, she coats them with Golden Open Acrylic (Matte) Medium, a liquid material that gives them a ghostly finish, and illuminates them from within using varying shades of white LED light. The resulting sculptures appear mysterious and hazy, a visual representation of a liminal space, bridging the actual world and a mythical universe. As Aschheim states, "The world we see is a personal experience. This installation offers a visual metaphor for how we record, process, retrieve, and share memories and experiences that exist inside our minds."

Deborah Aschheim's Camelot, now installed at LAX's Tom Bradley International Terminal.

Rec and Parks

So Long, Louis

Louis Suarez retires after 34 years of City service.

Friends and coworkers held a retirement party Jan. 22 for Louis Suarez, Head Carpenter, who retired from Rec and Parks after 34 years of City service.

The retirement party was held at the Cheviot Hills Recreation Center.

Fans of the iconic bridge in Echo Park have Louis and his crew to thank for the bridge's restoration. Alive! in 2010 chronicled the restoration of the bridge; it's just one of Louis' legacies to the City.

At the retirement event, Club Chief Operating Officer Robert Larios presented a plaque of congratulations to Louis from the Club.

Congratulations, Louis, on your great career, and enjoy your retirement.

Big Bear Snow Play

Big Bear Lake, Calif.

Angel Jr. and Aden: "Let the fun begin!"

Angel Jr. and Aden point to the prices.

Aden and Angel Jr. give three thumbs up!

Aden is having fun.

We just paid for and received our tickets. Let the fun begin!

Angel Jr., and Aden love snow tubing.

Hello, everyone!

For this month's installment, we traveled up to a place called Big Bear Snow Play, an area for snow tubing. Yes, this is one of those places where you go up a small hill and slide down on an inner tube. We usually stop and visit this place every time we're in Big Bear. The snow on the hill is both natural and man-made, which means that even on a warm day you can take a short ride to Big Bear and enjoy the snow.

It's only about two hours from downtown L.A. If you're an early bird and get up early, you could drive up, slide a few times and be back home all in one day. We left Saturday morning around 9 a.m. and we were there by 11:30 a.m.

Let's begin!

Snow Tubing: Once you arrive, the first thing to do is purchase the all-day pass (around $30). After an attendant attaches the all-day sticker, you can go in and find an inner tube. Good news: You'll be happy to know you won't have to climb up the hill each time. Snow Play provides an escalator on each side of the hill. When you get to the top of the hill, get in line for one of lanes. (Once the person before you is completely off the lane, then it's your turn).

You can go down the hill in groups or by yourself; both ways are fun. Your all-day pass provides you unlimited amounts of slides. If you just want to relax there are benches outside and tables inside a small lounge area. There is a small snack area inside where you can buy food.

Important Note: Be careful when sliding down the hill to make sure no one is below. We witnessed a few crashes.

Snow activities are fun, exciting, and a great way to spend you day.

Club Members: Please visit the Club's Website www.cityemployeesclub.com and go to Seasonal/Special Events or Ski Resorts on the Webpage. The City Employees Club offers snow-lift tickets to the following locations: Big Bear Mountain, Mountain High, Snow Valley, Lake Tahoe and Mammoth Mountain.

Be sure to hurry and purchase your tickets today because there are only a few weeks of winter left to enjoy. I would recommend everyone take the short drive up to Big Bear and enjoy snow tubing – you don't have to be an expert skier to enjoy the snow, and it's all for only $30 per person for the entire day. Excellent!

As always, be safe and Be Alive!

Snow or Otherwise, Meetings Keep Rolling

RLACEI

President's Report By Edward J. Harding President, RLACEI

Last month I spent a week at my home in Nevada. I have never seen so much snow and felt the very cold weather in my life. Due to the snow and the Highway Patrol, I missed the February business meeting.

I wish to thank Tom

Stemnock, Second Vice President, and Hal Danowitz, Secretary, for filling in for me and keeping me apprised.

Mike Wilkinson, LACERS Commissioner, reported that the Los Angeles, Riverside and Orange County Survey set the cost of living adjustment (COLA) at .09 percent. It was approved by LACERS Commission Board Feb. 9.

As I mentioned in my last article of a change in our lunch menu – we found a new vendor. I think you will like the menu. I know I do.

Our April 14 general meeting will be catered by our new vendor, Industry Events. If you like the lunch, we will have them cater our picnic. Comments are appreciated. Thank you.
See you April 14.

Why Do We Need to Watch Drug Costs?

Michael R. Wilkinson

LACERS Board Update, By Michael R. Wilkinson

When we think of drug companies, it is easy to see them through the Congressional testimony of Martin Shkreli, a company president who smirked during questioning, mocked the Representatives as “imbeciles” in social media after refusing to testify, and invoked the Fifth Amendment against self-incrimination. It is certainly unfair to lump all of the drug makers in with a CEO who had no problem boosting the costs of a drug for AIDS patients by 5,000 percent without any good reason.

If other drug cost increases are as shockingly high as this, plans such as LACERS must do everything they can to keep costs in line for all our members.

LACERS and its health benefits staff is working closely with our health consultant, Keenan and Associates, to be able to provide the best medication coverage for reasonable prices, so that we can provide this benefit at the lowest out-of-pocket cost to our members.

Some of the recommendations being considered were covered in an excellent recent article in Benefits magazine, published by the International Foundation of Employee Benefits Plans.

The article made several recommendations to control drug costs. Just a few examples are:

- Limit the use of combo drugs when a drug company has taken two drugs that are sold separately at a much lower price and combined them in one pill at a much higher price.
 - Make sure that the plan is not paying the more expensive cost of a patented drug after the patent expires and lower cost generic versions are available.
 - Ban the use of prescriptions for a drug that is now available over the counter in a non-prescription form at a lower price.
- There are several other ideas that are being reviewed. We will continue fight to get the best drug coverage for our members.

Backers of Pension Reform Pull Measure From Ballot

Michael Karsch

Legislative Report: Pension Law and Policy, By Michael Karsch

Most readers should have read or heard in January that the backers of the pension reform initiative requiring voter approval of each city, county and state pension plan, plus increases, has been withdrawn for 2016, when they had planned on putting their initiative on the November general election ballot. This is the initiative by former San Jose Mayor Chuck Reed and former San Diego City Councilman Carl DeMaio. The initiative would have applied to any new hire government employee after 2019. The backers held off going forward because, according to a newspaper interview, they wanted to see how the U.S. Supreme Court would rule on mandatory union fees (the case involved the California Teachers' Association). Since labor unions are the major financial support of opponents to the initiative, if the Supreme Court rules against the use of their fees for political actions, a major blow would beset the unions and an opposition war chest would be less strong to thwart the initiative supporters.

At press time: The death of Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia might affect the outcome of the pending case of union fees. – Ed.

An op-ed in the Los Angeles Times Jan. 28 by Ed Ring focuses on the underfunding of CalPERS (to which the City of LA does not belong). CalPERS' financial statements released in December for the fiscal year ending June 30, 2015 showed the pension system was funded at 77 percent and that their actuaries plan on earning 7.5 percent annual return on investments, but had only achieved 2.4 percent. Ed Ring attributes the problems facing CalPERS to over-optimistic stock purchases and inadequate contributions. He also blames two state laws: the passage of Prop. 21 in 1984, allowing CalPERS fund managers to move many investments from safe and predictable bonds to volatile stocks and hedge funds; and to the passage by the Legislature of SB 400 in 1999, which increased pension payouts by 50 percent for California Highway Patrol employees, quickly encouraging all other state agencies and local governments to do the same. Today the State pays in about $3 for every $1 in employee contributions.

COLA Inches Up
For July 1, 2016

LARFPA

Lee Kebler

One of the most asked questions our Directors and office receives every year at this time is, “What is our COLA?” Many times when the person is told what the COLA (cost of living adjustment) is, and the COLA is low, they want to know if we can change the source of the COLA from the Bureau of Labor Statistics to a different organization. Most large organizations have actuaries who index the inflationary trends in our country, but they are tailored to that company. They do not provide the coverage that the Bureau of Labor Statistics covers for about 90 percent of our population. There are 87 areas in the United States, and our area is composed of Los Angeles, Orange, Riverside, San Bernardino and Ventura counties.

Our COLA is based on the consumer price index (CPI) from the Bureau of Labor Statistics on the last day of February and becomes effective July 1 of that year for the Los Angeles-Orange-Riverside County area. We always wait anxiously for that information. We have been using the bureau’s index since 1967, when the City first authorized a cost of living adjustment for our retirees.

The CPI is based on services and goods that people buy for day-to-day living. These items are food, shelter, clothing, fuel, transportation, medical services, drugs and entertainment. The bureau collects and publishes this information for two groups: One, all urban consumers, which covers general population; and two, urban wage earners and clerical workers, which covers about 28 percent of the population. To compile this information, bureau employees gather information on approximately 80,000 items from almost anything a consumer uses or buys, including taxes on the items or services. In addition to the wage earners and clerical workers, the CPI includes groups like professional, management, technical, unemployed, retired workers and others. They have been providing this information since their inception in 1884.

I noticed the COLA for the non-uniformed retirees of the City was two percent at the end of Dec. 31. This means that they will receive that increase on their pension checks July 1. That sure beats the one-tenth of one percent that we received last year. Let’s hope this increase in the COLA continues and we get some help on our continued loss of buying power.

John Adams once said, “In my many years I have come to a conclusion that one useless man is a shame, two is a law firm and two or more is a congress.”

Cost of Living Adjustment for 2016

LACERS

Mary Beetz

LACERS’ UPDATE BY MARY BEETZ

By May of each year, the LACERS Board is required to determine the Consumer Price Index (CPI) for the Los Angeles area in order to provide a Cost of Living Adjustment (COLA) to eligible retirees and beneficiaries. Just how much of a COLA a Retired Member will receive depends on their retirement date and how much is “banked” from previous years.

For 2016, the CPI increase for the Los Angeles area is 0.9%. The Board of Administration adopted the cost-of-living adjustments (COLA) for eligible retired Members and beneficiaries effective July 1, 2016 at their February 9, 2016 meeting. This COLA will be included in your July 2016 check or direct deposit.

The Heat and Beauty of Southeast Asia

Hal and Co. head to Southeast Asia for a 21-day land tour. Part 1

In April and May 2015, Hal and Evelyn took a land tour of Southeast Asia, starting in Bangkok and including Cambodia, Laos, Vietnam, Malaysia and Taiwan. In each place they hired a private car and guide, except for Taiwan.

Leaving Los Angeles on Friday, April 17, 2015, we crossed the International Date Line and missed April 18 altogether. Our flight on Philippine Airlines departed LAX on time and arrived in Manila, where we changed planes for Bangkok, on time. We flew business class, which is their first class. Our seats were able to lie flat and were comfortable. The cabin crew was good, and they served dinner and breakfast. It was a 14-hour flight to Manila. We both slept about five hours. We arrived in Manila at 3:30 a.m. Because we were in transit, we did not go through immigration; we were walked through the security process and were taken to the lounge for our five-hour layover. At that hour the airport was quiet but not entirely deserted. We were scheduled to arrive in Bangkok around noon. Thailand is 14 hours ahead of LA.

We arrived April 19 in Bangkok on time, and after going through immigration and getting our bags we discovered that no one was there to pick us up. The Thailand Travel Association desk helped us get in touch with our inbound travel agency. They had no record, so they said. The gentleman told us to take a taxi to the hotel. By the time we got there he had made a reservation for our rooms and said the tour guide would call me with info on tour the next day. We stayed at the Royal Orchid Sheraton. We had a great room overlooking the river. Our guide for our tour the next day called, and we made plans to meet in the lobby at 8:30 a.m.

Evelyn and I decided to take a walk to help fight the jet lag. The weather was hot and very humid, at least 90 degrees. My shirt was soaking wet. Most of the stores were closed, but as we got closer to the high-speed rail station there were lots of food stalls, and we found a Starbucks. Evelyn got a Bangkok mug. It was next door to a Mickey Dee's, but we haven't seen many other American franchisees yet. The River City mall is next to the hotel in the other direction. We remembered being there in 2006 and decided to go there for dinner.

We found a Thai restaurant overlooking the river. We were the only people in the place. I asked the waiter if that day was a holiday, and he said it was "super Sunday" (the Sunday before a Monday holiday) and that was why most of the shops were closed. We had three dishes, the deep-fried grouper being the best. It was too much food for just the two of us. The bill was 1700 baht, around $53, including beer and service.

I was learning to use the Thai greeting – hands together like praying and a bow of the head. The culture was not much on shaking hands.

We slept pretty well the night before, so we seemed to be get back on a regular sleep schedule. The next day, April 20, we took our tour of Bangkok. We had done it before, but this was the jumping off point for the rest of our travels.

We had breakfast in the hotel. It was a large buffet with Asian, American and European foods. I was looking forward to the next day's buffet.

Bangkok is the capital of the Kingdom of Thailand. Thailand has about 62 million people; 95 percent are Buddhist. The government is a democratic constitutional monarchy. Thailand is in Southeast Asia, equidistant between India and China. It is about the size of France.

Our guide was waiting for us at 8:30 a.m., and we drove to the Grand Palace for a two hour walking tour. We had visited here on our last trip, but we saw much more this time. We saw, among other things, the Emerald Buddha, the City's most important Buddha, located in the "Wat" (religious complex) within the Grand Palace grounds. The buildings that make up the Grand Palace and the grounds defied description – beyond beautiful.

It was very warm and humid. There were a lot of tourists, but our guide – his name was Lo – said that this was the off-season. I took my new (thanks to Michelle) Klean Kanteen and I had it filled with water and ice in the hotel. It was a lifesaver. We also bought water along the way; you must stay hydrated. As a reminder, no matter where you are, always check that the seal on the bottle is unbroken. After the tour we drove around the city and got back to our hotel at noon.

We decided to lie out by the pool and go to the new night market that evening. The heat made it very difficult to want to be outside. The pool overlooked the river. We had a light lunch and shared a Philly cheesesteak and beer. We layed out until 4 p.m. I still felt a little lightheaded and I drank some water with an electrolyte tablet that Evelyn brought from home. You lose a lot of minerals when you sweat in this heat. You can also drink Gatorade, but who wants all that sugar?

The new night market is called Asiatique and is in a complex of old warehouses on the river. The Sheraton had a river shuttle that went to the Asiatique dock, which is also by the high-speed rail station stop by the river, so we could catch the Asiatique shuttle either way. The whole trip took about 30 minutes, and the best part was that it was free. We had dinner in Fire and Food, a more Western restaurant; we decided no Thai food tonight. After dinner we walked the stalls and Evelyn bought two pairs of Thai pants for $10. Inside the shopping area it was very warm, but outside it was quite pleasant. After a couple of hours, we caught the river shuttle back to the hotel. On the Sheraton boat they provided cold towels and water. The old night market, which is still in business, is more crowded and raunchy with lots of sex shops, and therefore less suitable for kids. Our hotel, like most of the better tourist hotels, was on the Chao Phray River. Most of the better hotels had shuttle boats for guests.

The next day we were scheduled to fly to Laos and had to leave the hotel at 7 a.m.,

A wonderful temple in Luang Prabang, Laos.

The Grand Palace in Bangkok, Thailand.

which meant getting up at 5 a.m.

We were up at 5 a.m. and had breakfast by 6 a.m. Our guide met us in the lobby just before 7 a.m., and we drove 45 minutes to the airport. He stayed with through check-in and left when we reached security. He was an excellent guide, and I tipped him well. The Bangkok Airport is massive; it feels like you are walking forever. We cleared everything and were at the gate at 8:30 a.m., an hour before our flight boarded. We could have used the airline lounge, but it didn't seem worth the walk to another concourse. Evelyn browsed the shops and duty free but didn't fall in love with anything.

I received an email apology from the tour company and said we would have a fruit basket in our next hotel.

We flew Bangkok Airlines. The plane was an ATR 72, a high-wing turboprop. The plane was less than a third full and we landed in Luang Prabang on schedule at noon. We already had our visas and cleared immigration quickly, got our bags and met our guide Wat. The drive to our hotel took about 15 minutes. The check-in process was very formal – a cold towel and a glass of fruit juice. We sat the whole time, and they brought documents to us. The last item was a friendship bracelet, which kept on until it rots off – it was made of colored string, so we figured it shouldn't take too long. (Turns out I was wrong about that – after a year, it was still hanging on.) The room is of a very colonial style and was well appointed. We were given a real key (no key card). We were scheduled to start our first tour at 2 p.m. While it was warm here it didn't feel oppressive. Rain was possible the next day. The city had a population of only 65,000 people, and the main street ran out in front of our hotel, the Maison Souvannaphoum. I didn't try to pronounce the second word. After Bangkok we were back to the hinterlands, and it felt good.

Our first stop that afternoon was the National Museum, the former royal residence. It has been preserved as it was when the royal family last lived there. The royal family was deposed when Laos become the democratic republic in 1975. We also got to see the real emerald Buddha, which was on display for an upcoming holiday. There seemed to be copies of Buddhas that were called representations and were sometimes used when the famous one was placed elsewhere.

After visiting the museum, we took a walking tour of some of the city's historic temples and pagodas. We spent most of our time at Wat Xieng Thong, the best of all the monasteries and temples in the city. Luang Prabang dates back to 1513 and in 1995 was designated a UNESCO World Heritage Site. Luang Prabang was the original capital of Laos until it was moved to Vientiane, which was one reason this area had so much historical value.

That night we walked to the night market, about 10 minutes from the hotel. For the night market, the main street was blocked for at least a quarter of a mile. The market was open each night from 6 to 10 p.m. It offered all kinds of handicrafts, cloths and general tourist stuff. I wanted to eat before shopping. Evelyn said she saw a restaurant while we were with the guide today. We walked all the way to where we were in the afternoon and couldn't find it, because she saw it from the car and we didn't drive in this area. I was not happy, but we walked back toward the start of the night market and sort of picked the first place we saw that looked like it was safe to eat in. We had two main dishes – sticky rice and two large Laos beers for the grand total of $17. Things were really inexpensive here. After dinner Evelyn bought a few things and even with bargaining we overpaid because it was so cheap. We used dollars, and the rate of exchange is 8,000 kip to $1. You could retire here and live like a king, although I hope not ending like the last king of Laos.

Next month we start with a ride on the Mekong River and then travel to Siem Reap, Cambodia. ■

Champions Kickoff Helps To Make Resolutions Stick

On Jan. 22, LACERS Well Members gathered at the Griffith Park Ranger Visitor Center Auditorium to participate in the 2016 Wellness Kickoff. A resounding 61 retired Members and guests enjoyed our presentation on “Making Your New Year’s Resolutions Stick” followed by a three-mile hike led by Commissioner Cynthia Ruiz. This was one of our best turnouts for a fitness-related event, and I think that was, in no small way, attributable to what many of us feel at the beginning of a new year: that we can somehow do better and be better, resolving that if we try really hard, we can make a positive change. But can we?

History of Resolutions

We are not the first, or likely the last, civilization to make promises that are nearly impossible to keep. The ancient Babylonians were the earliest on record to make New Year’s resolutions, although at that time, their new year began in March. Vows to repay debt and generally engage in good conduct were made to the gods and if achieved, the gods would provide a favorable growing season. It wasn’t until Julius Caesar tinkered with the Roman calendar that January became the month of the New Year, but the vows of good-deedery still flowed like the Nile. January is named after Janus, the Romans’ two-faced god; the Romans believed that Janus simultaneously glanced back over the past year while looking optimistically towards the next, so they offered their vows and sacrifices in hopes of earning the deity’s favor. Considering the antiquity of the New Year’s resolution, one would think that we would, by now, be better at making them, but the statistics say otherwise:

- Nearly 50 percent of Americans set a New Year’s resolution this year; one out of three people set resolutions that didn’t last 31 days;
- Two out of three people set fitness goals as part of their resolution; of those, 73 percent gave up before meeting their goal;
- Nearly 40 percent forgot about their resolutions by March, and 92 percent of those who made a resolution will fail by the end of the year (National statistics courtesy of Sean Foy, Fitness Expert and author of Walking 4 Wellness, WELCOA) So if you, like the ancient Babylonian, the early Roman, and the more modern American, made a resolution in January only to find that you have forgotten or ditched it by March, here are some likely reasons why resolutions often fail:

Because you think you should.

If the impetus to lose weight, be healthier or make more money is a direct result of an external influence, from, for example, a loved one or at the gentle (or perhaps not-so-gentle) prodding of a peer, the likelihood of success is minimal at best. Although as children, we do what we “should” to avoid unpleasant consequences, as adults, the rules change. Now armed with sophisticated deductive reasoning and a knack for plausible deniability, the adult brain concludes that more often than not, the consequences probably aren’t that bad— like skipping the gym and being met at the door by a disapproving partner. Uncomfortable perhaps, but rarely fatal.

There is a lack of commitment or motivation.

Similar to above, if the motivation to make a behavior change is lacking, the likelihood of making the change, let alone sustaining it, are even smaller. Although often attributed to a lack of willpower, studies show that a shortage of motivation is more commonly a result of an aptitude for failure, or simply put, a failure to believe in oneself. This means that unless we truly believe we are capable of making the change, we will not succeed, regardless of how seemingly simple the change may be. Self-confidence, in this case, is directly proportional to success.

Unrealistic expectations.

Unless you have a cohort of managers, assistants and handlers like Beyoncé to guide you unwavering to the goal’s finish line (in her case, a reported 20-pound weight loss in two weeks for her role in Dreamgirls), chances are your expectations may be set too high to be realistic. For some, the amount of work needed to accomplish the goal may be grossly underestimated, including how many hours/weeks it will take to learn a new skill or how many calories must be reduced daily for weight loss to occur. Ultimately, these miscalculations lead to mounting frustration: a motivation-killer for the best of us.

We don’t appreciate the now.

What if we could all be happier, in this moment, despite wanting to lose weight, have a larger home, or find the perfect job? The problem with goals may be that, while exciting and an important component of self-growth, they fail to examine the value of what currently is, emphasizing only on what could be. If a goal is accomplished, a new goal is quickly enlisted to take its place, leaving little opportunity to celebrate the space between the work and the goal posts. Or, in other words, leaving little time to enjoy the journey.

Larry's Career, Remembered

Larry Patrich retires from the DWP after 45 years of City service.

Larry and his wife, Dori, the day he filed for retirement.

Although Larry Patrich, long a DWP presence in the Owens Valley, retired a few years ago, his memories are still vivid. Here's a recap and photos of his City career, which lasted more than 45 years. He retired in 2013.

December 1969: Larry starts working for the City right out of high school as a Garage Attendant at City Hall garage, washing cars and filling them with gas when they were returned.

1970: He transfers to Hyperion Treatment Plant, still as a garage attendant but changing oil on vehicles and tire repair. Back then the City still had the beaches so he was able to spend time on the beach servicing the Lifeguard trucks and equipment.

1971: He enters the Army at Ft. Ord, went to Germany as a Mechanic and an Atomic Demolition Specialist, and comes home in 1973.

He returns to City Hall as the Garage Attendant before becoming a Mechanic Apprentice for Transportation, working on everything from autos to dump trucks. He graduated his apprenticeship in 1978.

1978: He transfers to Rec and Parks as a Mechanical Repairer, working on small equipment and later on servicing the City's many swimming pools.

1984: He becomes a Mechanical Repair Supervisor and supervises the swimming pool crews making repairs and improvement, he also has a crew working in the L.A. Zoo doing repairs and a crew running the Crystal Springs Water Dept. in Griffith Park that supplied all the water to the park as well as the Zoo, the Greek Theater and the Observatory. After awhile he becomes totally in charge of the Griffith Park water system; his crew worked hard to make repairs to an ailing water system. Finally after a few years the DWP takes over the water system and is now owned by them and serves the best water to the patrons of the park anywhere.

2002: He is promoted and becomes a Water Works Mechanic for the DWP working on the new Owens Lake Dust Mitigation Project; at the time there were only five employees there.

2006: He is promoted again to Labor Supervisor still on Owens Lake, supervising the Water Works Crew and labor forces working on Owens Lake. By now there were new buildings being built and 20 employees.

2010: He is promoted to Construction and Maintenance Supervisor of crews on Owens Lake.

2013: Larry retires after 45 years of service to the people of Los Angeles.

"What most people don't know is that when I went to Owens Lake in 2002, I left my beautiful wife, Dori, at home with my three young children, Jeremy, Sarah and Markota," Larry remembers. "I came home only on weekends and holidays, but I promised it would only be for a year, no more than that. As it turned out it was closer to 11 years.

"My kids are grown and I am still married to my wife. I have been staying home most of the time, but occasionally with my wife's blessing I travel back to Owens Valley to visit all my friends there."

Congratulations on your long and distinguished career, Larry!

For Felix

Sanitation's West Valley Yard holds blood drive for coworker recovering from cancer.

Sanitation's West Valley Yard held a blood drive in support of coworker Felix Alonso, who is recovering from leukemia.

The blood drive took place Dec. 3.

Felix has worked as a West Valley RCTO since 1989. Last December, he was diagnosed with stage four leukemia and began chemotherapy right away. After nearly six weeks of treatment he has come out of his medically induced coma and is breathing on his own and is alert. He still has a long road to recovery, but so far it appears he's heading in the right direction!

Felix is married with two daughters and a good family! They have stood strong by Felix as well as all of his friends and City employees, especially his West Valley family throughout this ordeal and will continue to stand by their brother! That's why this blood drive event is taking place – to aid him in his recovery. All the sanitation districts have participated by having mobile drives at their districts.

Special thanks go to Bryant Sibert for helping the Club produce this article.

John's Picture Perfect Contest

John Hawkins, Club CEO

"I just took this image in Guatemala. I captured this endearing moment during a religious village celebration that obviously had some very intrigued young observers."

– Yves Didier, Airports

John's comment: A-w-e-s-o-m-e! I love this photo, Yves. It could easily be in an issue of National Geographic. Well done!

"I always think it's cool to see different things like a Ferris wheel on Broadway and Fifth Street. Also, check out one of the riders."

– Karen Kishita, Public Works

John's comment: L.O.L.! It wasn't until I looked closer at the rider when I busted out laughing. Love it, Karen!

"This was an old abandoned oil-burning boiler control panel at Harbor Generating Station. It made and controlled steam, which went to a stream-driven generator. The morning light was perfect, and you can almost feel the dust on it. This was replaced with a more efficient natural gas-burning turbine."

– John Nance, Retired, DWP

John's comment: Not only did I feel the dust but I could smell it! Nice work on capturing this old control panel. It's a nice touch turning it into black and white.

"Reflection of City Hall."

– Tom Moutes, LACERS

John's comment: Brilliant photo, Tom – it's a mix of reality and fabrication, all rolled into a tapestry of architectural greatness!

Cabrillo Aquarium hosts annual Earth Day Fair with focus on saving local birds.

City Employees are invited to join the Cabrillo Marine Aquarium Sat., April 16 for an Earth Day celebration. The Earth Day and Coastal Bird Fest celebrates nature and local wildlife with a beach cleanup, educational demonstrations, music, arts and crafts, and activities for children of all ages.

Participants can help be a part of the solution by joining in a beach cleanup from 8 a.m. to 10 a.m., with supplies and refreshments provided.

Beginning at 10 a.m., guests can enjoy the Earth Day and Coastal Bird festivities at the Aquarium, which will offer earth-friendly sustainability workshops, local musicians, fun arts and crafts, local experts giving bird talks and leading bird walks in the nearby Coastal Park; and dozens of exhibitors demonstrating how to care for the earth and protect the planet.

During the spring, more than 100 species of birds can be found around the Cabrillo Beach Coastal Park, including shorebirds, sparrows, raptors and more. Migrating birds utilize the wide variety of habitats in the Coastal Park for feeding and resting during their long journeys. The Earth Day and Coastal Bird Fest will celebrate the resident and visiting birds of this area, and their role in the environment.

The Earth Day and Coastal Bird Fest ends at 3 p.m., while the Aquarium is open until 5 p.m. Throughout the day, the Aquarium provides opportunities to examine Southern California marine life, visit the touch tank, search the Virginia Reid Moore Research Library for more information about local sea life and coastal birds, observe the newest arrivals in the Aquatic Nursery and let curiosity be the guide in the interactive Exploration Center.

The aquarium is at lat 3720 Stephen M. White Dr. in San Pedro and is a Rec and Parks facility with support from Friends of Cabrillo Marine Aquarium. Limited car parking at Cabrillo Beach is $1 per hour.

Sunset Walk

6:55 – 7:55 p.m.

The Observatory offers a sunset hike led by a Park Ranger and a museum guide. The easy walk starts on the Observatory’s West Terrace, proceeds up the Charlie Turner trail to the Berlin Forest on the hill just north of the Observatory, and then returns to the West Terrace. The distance covered is about half a mile over the course of an hour at a very moderate pace with stops along the way to discuss the highlights and history of Griffith Park, and objects visible in the evening sky.

Note: The Charlie Turner trail is a moderately steep earthen trail. The Observatory recommends footwear appropriate for hiking.

The Smart Move

The Influence of Stress

Stress is one of the greatest influences in our lives. It can come from a myriad of places (school, work, home, friends, etc.) and has an impact on our daily lives and longterm health. Today, I want to discuss stress as it relates to finances.

When it comes to finances and money, there are plenty of things people stress about:

- Can I pay my bills this month?
- Am I saving too little?
- Am I saving too much?
- What is the stock market doing? Is it going too high and is it going to crash?
- Will I have enough money in retirement?
- Budgets are scary! Making one and sticking to it makes me anxious.

A 2014 study by Financial Finesse found that those individuals with the highest reported levels of financial stress were women under the age of 30 who had minor children and earned under $60,000 annually, with 58 percent reporting high or overwhelming financial stress.

To help manage financial stress, we have come up with a few tips and tricks:

Use a secure budgeting and personal finance software: As we said before, budgets are scary! They make you face how much you are really spending and where you are spending it. Budgeting and personal finance software (many can be found online) help you to track your spending by accessing your bank, loan and credit card accounts and categorizing what you spent each month. If you aren’t comfortable using one of these services, there are spreadsheet templates online that you can use to help organize your own budget.

Plan in advance: Planning in advance can apply to many things. Mainly, we are discussing planning for a goal and planning for the unexpected. Want to go on vacation in a few months? It is probably in your best interest to start saving ahead for the trip rather than charging your card to the limits.

In terms of planning for the unexpected, life is a spectacular journey, and no one truly knows what could happen. Recently, I encountered someone who had all of their tires slashed by local hoodlums and did not have the money to pay to have them replaced. If an emergency fund had been prudently prepared, they would have been able to purchase new tires.

Live within your means: Not everyone can drive a Maserati, live in a million-dollar mansion or take annual vacations overseas. Keeping up with the Joneses doesn’t mean you’ll be as happy as they are, and who says they’re happy anyway? Stretching yourself too thin can bring stress with it that could quash any joy that your expensive toys or home brought with them in the first place.

Take advantage of products available through payroll deduction: Most employers, particularly public employers make a menu of voluntary insurance and saving products available through payroll deduction. There are many affordable voluntary insurance products that can give you a safety net against unforeseen medical expenses. Payroll deduction takes the bite out of having to write a check each month. Payroll deducted benefits give you the opportunity to pay yourself first. Pay yourself before you get a chance to spend it.

CBLife is The Club’s new partner for four areas – life insurance, critical illness insurance, retirement income and accident medical expense insurance. Currently the Club offers three CBLife products: the Security Builder Plan, the Timber Ridge Critical Illness Plan, and Accident Medical Expense Plan.

The Pipes Are

The all-volunteer Los Angeles Police Emerald Society Pipes and Drums Band is marching to a bigger future of fun and service.

March means the month of Celtic parades. And with that, Alive! brings you the story and faces behind the Los Angeles Police Emerald Society Pipes and Drums band – an Irish pipe band that represents the grand tradition of police bands. The all-volunteer band, which rose from the ashes of previous LA Police bands to start anew 20 years ago, is growing, and its presence is felt not only locally, but nationally, too.

The band has a lot of LAPD members and continues its relationship with the department. But it's independently managed and funded, and its musicians hail from several police and safety departments in Southern California. Membership is open to everyone.

The LAPES Pipes and Drums band is an independent Emerald Society chapter and a member of the National Conference of Law Enforcement Emerald Societies. It's the only Police Emerald Society Pipe Band on the west coast of the United States. The band formed as part of the larger LA Police Emerald Society social group, but is now independent of that group.

The band consists of members who are active, former or retired law enforcement officers from law enforcement agencies throughout Southern California. Individuals with no prior law enforcement background are also a vital part of the band;

Here are some ways you can support the all-volunteer Los Angeles Police Emerald Society Pipes and Drums Band.

Join the Band

The Pipes and Drums band is open to anyone with prior experience – or otherwise – as long as you support its mission of supporting law enforcement. They'll teach you how to play the bagpipe or drum. Rehearsals are Saturday mornings.

Contact the band's president, Sgt. II Michael Apodaca, Retired, LAPD: iflyla36@yahoo.com, or visit the band's Website: lapespipesanddrums.org

Party!

The band's chief annual fundraiser is the Cigars Under the Stars event, to be held this year in late November. It's a formal event, with cigar and whiskey tastings, an auction with some items signed by celebrity friends of the band, an elegant meal, and so forth. This event usually sells out, and has been expanded to accommodate the demand.

the only condition is that they have a sincere desire to support the law enforcement community. The band is a non-profit organization and all band members volunteer their time. The band does not accept any payment for its services. However, it accepts donations. These donations are used solely for the operational costs for the band.

The band respectfully plays at services, memorials and tributes for police officers, firefighters and military personnel who have made the ultimate sacrifice. It supports law enforcement personnel, firefighters and the military by playing at any event that will serve the respective agency or organization. Prior events at which it has played include dedications to new facilities, retirements, banquets, picnics, graduation ceremonies, valor award ceremonies, welcome home celebrations for military personnel, and funerals for retired or former law enforcement, firefighters, or military. It also supports and serves the community by playing at fairs, parades, school events, and Highland Games.

The Alive! Interview

Carrying the Tradition

On Jan. 30, Club CEO John Hawkins and Alive! editor John Burnes visited an Emerald Society Pipes and Drums band practice and interviewed Sgt. II Michael Apodaca, Retired, LAPD, 42 years of City service (above left), and the band's president; and Det. Supervisor Scott Walton, LAPD, 28 years of City service, and the band's co-founder. Both Michael and Scott also play in the band. The interview took place at the LAPD Central Area, where the band rehearses.

Thanks for inviting us today. Let's start with a very broad question – can you give us a history of the Pipes and Drums Band, and especially as it relates to the Emerald Society.

Scott Walton: Okay. It really starts back with an LAPD Officer named Ian Campbell in 1963, when he was killed.

That's the famous "Onion Fields" case.

Scott: That's correct. Ian Campbell was a bagpiper. He won the Southern California Highland Games awards when they were held in Santa Monica in the late '50s. He then went to the Korean War, and he played bagpipes in the Marine Corps while he was assigned to the Korean War. Then he came on LAPD, and he was assigned to Hollywood Division. He played his bagpipes in the basement at the old Hollywood Division. When he was killed in the "Onion Field" case that Joseph Wambaugh wrote the book about, that was the first LAPD funeral that had bagpipes. That was to honor him. So that's how LAPD got bagpipes.

The late LAPD Officer Ian Campbell.

The LAPD had a very famous Grade 1 competition pipe band through the 1970s and '80s called the LAPD Pipe Band. They were all professional pipers, and they won the world championships in Glasgow, Scotland, for several years; they're very well known.

In the meantime, I came along and I was playing tuba in the LAPD Concert Band; I majored in music at Cal State Fullerton. We were playing for the dedication of the National Police Memorial in Washington, D.C., in 1992. I only had four years on the job. I'm sitting there in the band playing tuba, which is my primary instrument, and I see the NYPD Emerald Society Pipe and Drum Band march through and they're huge. So loud. And I was just enamored. And they were cops, not professionals. And I thought, "This bagpipe, this is the cop instrument. This is the instrument that cops play." So I told my buddy, "I'm going to learn how to do that." It took me a few years and I learned how to play.

Some guys who knew me at South Traffic at the time said, "Scott, you ought to come to the Emerald Society and join up." My mother's maiden name is McDonald, so I associate myself to be Irish, not Scottish. In the Scottish band I was playing in at the time, I always felt like kind of a square peg. I went to the Emerald Society and I met Det. Steve Kirby. We were upset that the LAPD Pipe Band charged money to play for cop funerals. They charged the family of the deceased. The band charged money for whatever they did, because they were all professionals. They were used to being paid. But they weren't cops. None of them were. So Steve and I talked about this and said, "We need to make a band of cops that will do this stuff just out of respect for the family. We don't want them to pay." So right around 1993 or 1994, we slowly got it together. The band started out around 1994 with four of us. There were two pipers, a bass drum and a snare. We were part of the Emerald Society, the Irish social organization for the department: the Los Angeles Police Emerald Society.

We played at events for them and we did parades with their banner and what-not, and it was going very well. The band grew a little bit at a time, and then it got to the point to where we were getting requests to perform all over the place, and we were acting way outside of the scope of what we were doing with the Emerald Society itself.

More and more folks joined, and then we started getting donations. We never charge, but we would get donations for things. We were starting to get into some arguments with the Emerald Society over that. We got to the point that we thought, "Before this really turns ugly, we would be better off splitting apart." Our missions were differing so much. We wanted to become a 501(c)3 organization so people could get tax deductions for their donations. The society wasn't interested in that. So we realized, "Okay. We need to break off, form our own chapter." And that's what we did. We coexist as two separate chapters of Emerald Societies within the Los Angeles area. And we're friendly.

Michael Apodaca: Many of us are still members of them, so it's not like we're not friends. We have a different purpose. They're a social club of police officers of Irish descent. We specialize in traditional Irish music, so we'll play tunes that most bagpipe bands don't know and don't play. We're an Irish band. We're a connection between the police officers and the people that we serve. We want to show people that we're not just going out and arresting people and taking names. Through our music, we can bridge a gap that hasn't been bridged in the community. That's why you'll see us play a lot of events that you wouldn't see a bagpipe band at. We'll do community parades where people normally wouldn't see a bagpipe. That's why we have so much support from the department – we show a side of police officers that people don't see.

I should also mention that we're the Los Angeles Police Emerald Society Pipes and Drums. Not Los Angeles Police Department.

Right.

Michael: We have a Los Alamitos guy. We have a guy from the L.A. County Sheriff's Dept. We used to have a DEA guy. We had a TSA person. We had a San Jose officer, who still plays, though he's retired. The LAPD is our anchor. We do most of our events through them.

The 9/11 Connection

Michael, how did you get to be part of this?

Michael: Well, first, my mother's Irish. Her maiden name is McPike.

Anyway, because of the position I had in the department helping our police officers and their families when someone was seriously injured or killed, about 10 others and I were lucky enough to be selected to go back to New York after 9/11. I went to New York about four days after 9/11 and was working with the police officers and fire fighters at Ground Zero. And really we were there as peer support. We spent a couple weeks there and it was, phew, totally overwhelming. We went back about three months later, but this time we started attending funerals. There would be 150 pipers at every one of these funerals, and they were doing three funerals a day. And I talked to this piper, and you should've seen him. At the end of another long day he had his pipes down; he had his head down. So I asked him, "How many funerals have you done?" He looked like a wet rag. And he looked at me and he just says, "I have no idea." So then I asked him about playing the bagpipes, because I always loved the bagpipes, and my mother loves the bagpipes. And he says, "Give me an hour a day and you could be a piper." Well, he was wrong. It takes more than an hour a day.

But you didn't play before then at all.

Michael: No. I'd never touched a musical instrument in my life.

Wow.

Michael: Steve Kirby, who Scott mentioned earlier, had been telling me for years, "Hey, when are you going to play the pipes?" And I'd always told him, "One day. One day." And I came back from New York, and I called Kirby up.

This is the day.

Michael: I said, "Today's the day." So I showed up and started taking lessons with Scott. And my wife, Cindy, she's a nurse. She had never played the pipes either or anything like that. She said, "I think I could do that, too." We both learned together. And here we are, what, 13 years later, and I still take lessons every week.

Irish vs. Scottish

A lot of people might not know the difference between the Scottish traditions and the Irish traditions. You play Highland bagpipes, which are Scottish. Your clothing is sort of a blend of Scottish and Irish. You play Scottish and Irish music. It's very unusual. Do you try to be inclusive of everything?

Michael: Well, our kilt is called All Ireland Green. Instead of a traditional kilt, which would be a family name or region in Scotland, ours is like a national Irish tartan. So for anyone of Irish decent, it's acceptable. We have people who are not Irish. We have three Hispanics in our group. We have some Scots – you know, we let them in. That's kind of an inside joke. We play all the Scottish tunes because we have to. But we play a lot of tunes that the Scottish bands just don't play. And then we play American sets and a military set that are normally not played on the bagpipes. Our mission is for police, fire and military. We do a lot of events like that.

This year you're playing the St. Patrick's Day parade in Redondo Beach. You used to play at LA's St. Patrick's Day Parade, when we still had one.

Scott: I like to call our band Celtic – there's a lot of crossover. We play Irish music, but there's no denying we play on the Highlands Scottish bagpipe.

The Celtic community in L.A. is very small. Trying to get the support for a parade is not easy. We were fortunate that we had a Fire Capt. Richard Andrade. The same held true with the demise of the LAPD Pipe Band. They had support from upper-level chiefs and fundraising. When those chiefs went away and they didn't have new people come in, they lost their support and the band lost its funding and ultimately withered away. And we were there luckily to fill the gap with the Emerald Society Pipe Band. The same thing happened with the City's St. Patrick's Day Parade. When Captain Andrade retired, no one was there to pick up the baton, and that parade withered on the vine. Former Councilman Tom LaBonge did his best to try to get that parade restarted by doing the Pershing Square St. Paddy's Day ceremony. We try to support that. But the band can't make the parade happen. So we do our best to support any Celtic event that we can in the City. Maybe someone will come along someday and pick it up and get it going again.

Out of Pocket

Right. What's your relationship with the LAPD?

Michael: Well, early on it was pretty hard to get support. But now they love us. We do a lot of retirements and promotions, and of course all the memorials. But again, Scott is a detective, and if someone wants him to play for, say, a memorial service at Huntington Beach P.D. – I'm just using it as example – he has to be away from work. We always have to fight that. Last year we played 164 events, I think; the year before, 196 events.

For a volunteer band. Wow. That's amazing.

Michael: It costs our players a lot of money, especially the ones that are civilian employees. The City doesn't pay for us to travel. We have to raise that money, and we get a lot of support from the Police Protective League and the Police Memorial Foundation. And then there are a lot of people who want to give us money to help us. We just went to Salt Lake, and we got support from the airlines and our hotel. I don't even want to tell you what it costs to go to D.C. Cindy and I would go, and it was a $4,000 trip for us. We're blessed to be able to do it, but some of our players are not, and that's a lot of money. And that's just one event. When we go to the Scottish Games, they don't pay for our parking. That sounds kind of chintzy on our part, but it's $15 a car.

For two days.

Michael: Two days times 16 people. It all adds up.

The Alive! Interview

Calling All Pipers

Are you at the right amount of people or do you see it expanding?

Scott: No, no. We're growing. There is no magic number.

We're really the only police bagpipe, Irish police bagpipe band, Emerald Society, west of the Mississippi. We really have a niche out here. When we go to D.C. next year, we're going to be the host band. In D.C., there will be bands from New York and Chicago and Boston and Cleveland and Detroit, all these huge bands that are legacy bands that have been going for decades. They'll be saying, "Oh, look at the Emerald Society from L.A. They're so cute."

"I just want to hug them."

Scott: Right. We might have 15 players. They might have 100 or so. So we want to grow. When we go back next year, we're the lead band for the Police Memorial Week in Washington, D.C., which is a huge deal. You have to be really good musically to get that. For us to be the host band is a huge compliment to us. That's why I just started a new piper class. We've got about 15 new piping students right now.

We're recruiting. If people in other City departments want to be in the pipe band, let us know. My dream is to have a big band like New York or Detroit. Will that happen? Probably not in my lifetime, but we're going to try to get the thing going.

Service, Honor, Relief

Why does this band exist?

Michael: Our real purpose is to honor the police officers, firefighters and military and then secondly, bridge a gap between the community and the police. The LAPD spends a lot of money and resources for interaction with the community in a positive way. We're quite honestly all positive. I don't care who you are. You're going to be struck by the bagpipes. You may not like 'em but you're going to be struck by 'em.

We can bring interaction to the department and a positive light to all of law enforcement. That's probably one of the things that we're most proud of, and that's why we get so much support from so many different angels. We just had our bass drum stolen; it was in the news. The news story had more than 12,000 hits on that link. So there's a lot of interest in us.

Has it been returned?

Michael: No.

Scott: The band can't exist without the players, without the people from within the department or from within the community who want to play. Being a police officer is a very stressful job. When you play music, it takes your total concentration. You can't think about anything else. When you're doing music, when you're standing up there playing the bagpipe or the drum and trying to be a team with everyone else, that takes all of your mental ability. It gives your mind a vacation from all of your problems. I've had so many people come to practice and say, "Scott, when I walk out of here, I feel like a huge weight has been lifted off of me." That's another reason the band exists.

Hearing History

When bagpipes are played, people stop what they're doing. They stop talking. It's like a mystical sound. It's really amazing.

Scott: Yes. We get called to do a lot of banquets and conventions, retirements, whatever it is. It's hard to get everybody's attention at those events. I say, "Hey, just let us fire up a tune." I can't tell you how many times we've shut the crowd down so someone can start their convention or their banquet.

I love it. There's a long tradition of bagpipes in the military. This isn't a military band, but in a way you're continuing that tradition.

Scott: Of course, that's right. There's a documentary called The Ladies From Hell about the history of the bagpipe, especially in the military. When you play the bagpipe you really feel like you're connected with history. From a musical point of view, the bagpipe hasn't evolved. The old scale that the musicians used to play, back in the Renaissance period and before, is the scale we still use. A lot of modern things that have been done to instruments have not been done to the bagpipe. The bagpipe is kind of like a historical artifact. You're hearing the same kind of sound that people heard 700 or 800 years ago. It's exactly the same.

Michael: It's so awesome to be able to carry that tradition. Then there's another connection to history – going back to Ian Campbell is pretty rewarding. We can get emotional when we play at these funerals, because we may know the guy who just died, or his or her family. It can be tough.

You go to a funeral and you think you can keep it together, and then you hear music and you can't.

Michael: I don't care how many funerals you've done, and we've all done hundreds of them. There's always something that chokes you up. Then you just go like, "God, I hope I don't get choked up while I'm playing." And then you do.

I don't know if the bagpipes are the coolest instrument in the world. Does anyone ever bring that up to you?

Scott: Yes, there is a stigma that goes with it. My musician friends, they tease me. You have to have a thick skin. Of course, if you're a cop, you already do. You just have to take it in stride, if you really love doing it.

Michael: We have a great deal of pride in the band and we tough it out. It's really an honor to be playing in this band. It's something special.

Michael and Scott, thank you for your time.

Michael: Thank you.

Scott: Thank you guys. ■

153 Years of Animal Care

The story of our Dept. of Animal Services goes back to the Civil War era of 1863 when the population of the City was increasing rapidly. The need arose for the mayor to appoint a Pound Keeper and create a public pound. Since the drinking water of Los Angeles was drawn from the L.A. River, laws were enacted to restrict livestock from the river proximity.

The Public Pound Keeper in 1871 was required to provide and maintain a corral for impounded animals at his own expense. The City Marshal and his deputies delivered the stray animals to the Pound Keeper, who charged boarding fees if the livestock were reclaimed by the owner. After six days, the unclaimed animal (only livestock were specified) was advertised and could be sold.

The first one-year dog licenses were sold by the City Marshal in 1872, $1.50 for males and $3 for females. Also in that year hack drivers (horse buggy drivers) had to buy annual licenses and were fined $5 to $25 for an unhitched horse.

From 1907 to 1909 the Humane Animal League had a contract with the City and had a 1.5-acre lot and "pound" near Santa Fe and Ninth Streets. They boasted a great increase in licenses, and inspectors went door to door collecting the $2 license fee.

The first Humane Animal Commission was established in 1909 and marked the beginning of the Department by utilizing a Humane Animal Inspector and a staff of nine Deputies and a Clerk. This action was necessary due to the horrible pound conditions and thousands of sick and mangy dogs running the streets. Fights with the "dogcatchers" who used their nets to catch the strays were commonplace. House-to-house collection of dog license fees brought in much revenue to the City, and more than 4,000 of the 5,000 dogs collected were destroyed. However, this drastic action diminished further euthanasia greatly and the number of licensed dogs increased.

Finally, in 1925, the Dept. of Humane Treatment of Animals was formed with five Commissioners, a General Manager, a Secretary and 20 Inspectors. In 1929 the department got a new name – the Humane Department. The Ann Street Shelter, just East of Chinatown by Spring Street, was built in 1928 and was the state-of-the-art animal shelter in its time. Ann Street cost $60,000 to build and boasted a tiled bath for dogs and cats and an airy stable. The City actually owned this facility, unlike all the previous rented "pounds." The early shelters were on Porter Street, 46th and Alameda, Blake Avenue, and in Harbor City. Ann Street served the public outstandingly for 60 years until it was finally replaced by the North Central Care and Control Center on Lacy Street in 1988!

At the tail end of the Great Depression, two additional shelters were opened. The first Valley Shelter on Oxnard Street in Van Nuys opened in 1936. It had acreage to house large animals but was under scrutiny for overcrowded dog cages. In 1941 the West Los Angeles Shelter on Granville Avenue — the second City-owned shelter — opened, but was demolished in 1950 to make room for the combustible garbage incineration facility that the City established in its place.

Rabies was prominent in epidemic proportions throughout California in the 1930s. In 1931, $5,885 was appropriated to the Humane Dept. to round up stray dogs. Then in 1937-38, sadly, thousands of stray dogs were euthanized to control rabies. During the first six months of 1937, 363 rabid animals had bitten 318 persons in Los Angeles. Eight Inspectors, two Kennelmen and three trucks were added to handle the situation, and the Dept. then had a total of 56 on staff. By 1940 only 38 cases of rabies were found in Los Angeles. However, in 1948 there was a report of five rabid dogs in a three-month period in the Reseda-Van Nuys area.

Starting in 1948, permits were issued to commercial and some private establishments to ensure that animals were being maintained and exhibited in a humane manner. L.A. was a vanguard in the nation by developing the permit system.

To curb the overpopulation of dogs, spayed dog licenses were sold beginning in 1940. The City Council enacted a leash law for dogs in 1944, a triumph over the failed attempt to pass that law 18 years prior.

In 1947 the name of the department changed from the Humane Dept. to Animal Regulation so as not to confuse the municipal agency with the many private humane organizations in existence.

The 1936 Humane Dept. staff.

Animal Regulation patrolled beaches during the 1970s for injured wildlife rescue and leash law violations.

Circa 1921: "Los Angeles kiddies giving aid to homeless sick dog." This was before Google could be consulted.

In South L.A., the SPCA facility at 3612th Eleventh Ave. was acquired by the City in 1949 and became the Southwest Branch

Animal Shelter. The Valley Shelter in North Hollywood on Sherman Way was opened in 1950 and replaced the Oxnard Street Valley Shelter. The second San Pedro Harbor Shelter, City owned, was completed in 1951 and replaced the older rented structure in Harbor City.

A policy was approved in 1950 by a vote of the general City population to allow unclaimed animals to be released to medical research laboratories. The court dismissed an injunction the next year that tried to block the move. The citizens of Los Angeles rescinded this policy later in 1981.

In 1954 there were 137 people working for the Dept., and finally a full-time veterinarian was hired. The City required all dogs to be vaccinated for rabies in 1956, and by 1958 the state law requiring rabies vaccinations was enacted. Licensing and rabies vaccinations went hand-in-hand to protect the dogs and also the citizens from this deadly virus.

The new Missouri Avenue West Los Angeles shelter costing $170,000 opened in 1960 and filled the ten-year void of coverage for the beaches and the Westside. Then in 1961 the animal collection vehicles were repainted from gray to yellow to make them more visible.

The second Valley shelter, the West Valley Shelter, was opened in Chatsworth in 1970 and cost $600,000. It was the first shelter to have a pasture for horses and would be totally air-conditioned, kennels and offices alike. Shortly after its opening, the West Valley Shelter survived a horrific valley earthquake and was able to participate in emergency operations. Los Angeles boasted the formation of City-run spay and neuter clinics at the Ann Street shelter in 1971 and the Valley Shelter and South LA spay-neuter clinics opened in 1973. 1975 brought new procedures to help abate neighborhood barking dog nuisance problems. Beginning in 1971, the annual St. Francis of Assisi Award was designated to a meritorious champion of animal humane work who was recognized by the mayor in a ceremony at City Hall. In 1972 two Animal Control Officers were assigned to providing humane education to LAUSD elementary school students. Ann Street, South Central, Harbor and East Valley shelters were in dire need of replacement, and the West LA Shelter needed an addition, but a $10.3 million bond issue measure unfortunately failed to get ballot approval in 1973. It would be 30-plus years before those new shelters would get funded. The Animal Airlift program in 1976 allowed 961 wild animals to be relocated from the City to the Angeles National Forest. By the end of the 1970s the veterinary staff in the City shelters were vaccinating dogs and cats for the common contagious diseases and were using pentobarbital euthanasia in place of the Euthanair decompression chamber. The Harbor Shelter and South LA shelters were updated with new veterinary hospital units. The Animal Control Officers used to carry handcuffs in case a citizen became unruly, but that practice became prohibited in 1979. In 1988 the North Central Shelter on Lacy Street in Lincoln Heights was completed, and Ann Street was finally shuttered. The spacious new building had a large animal barn, a spay-neuter clinic and a large multipurpose training room. Some of the first legislation in the nation to deal with dangerous dog and barking dog problems was implemented in the department, also in 1988. The 1990s and early 21st century brought many changes to Animal Services. Radical animal activists would wreak havoc on the department and called for the City to achieve a "no kill" policy; a succession of short-lived General Managers would be appointed. There was a trial policy in 1991, soon discontinued, that mandated that pit bulls could not be adopted and had to be euthanized. The Hayden Bill of 1999 was a state bill initiated by critics of the tumultuous conditions in the aging Los Angeles shelters. The law increased the number of days an animal must be held and mandated a holding period for relinquished and community (feral) cats. Veterinary treatment was required for all pets. The challenge to hold more animals for longer periods was met by the department in with the passage of the $154 million Prop. F Bond in 2000. In 2006 the North Central shelter would get many new outside runs and a behavioral wing, and the West Valley Shelter would undergo a radical expansion. Beginning in 2007, impressive new shelters would replace the 50-plus-year-old East Valley, Harbor and West Los Angeles structures. The Northeast Shelter would be completed, but the recession prevented its opening. The overcrowded South Los Angeles main shelter and the Annex would move to Chesterfield Square in 2012. By 2016, Animal Services staff would expand to 312 full-time and 29 part-time workers. The department that had its beginnings more than 150 years ago has become one of the most excellent municipal animal regulatory agencies in the world. ■

The Eleventh Avenue Shelter (Southwest Branch) during the 1950s. It was formerly an S.P.C.A. facility but was purchased by the City in 1949.

In 1952, the Identacode tattooing procedure preceded present-day microchip identification of dogs.

The Revenant

Rated R
My Score: 5 (out of 5)

Leonardo DiCaprio is a scout for fur trappers in the 1820s American frontier. His group is attacked by American Indians; his son is killed; and he is mauled by a bear and left for dead. The Revenant is a grueling story of survival and revenge and not recommended for the queasy or sensitive. But all others will no doubt enjoy the grit and struggle, and especially the acting of Tom Hardy, the best movie bad guy I’ve seen in a long time. Director Alejandro Iñárritu has made a brilliant film, with cinematography that is picture perfect.

Hail, Caesar!

My Score: 3 (out of 5)

Hail, Caesar! follows Eddie Mannix (Josh Brolin), head of studio production, as he attends to the daily problems at the fictional Capitol Pictures. The kidnapping of leading man Baird Whitlock (George Clooney) is only one of many challenges that particular day.

For the viewer it’s an enjoyable look back into an imaginary studio, with plenty of today’s star power on display: Scarlett Johansson as an aqua-movie star, Channing Tatum as a Gene-Kelly-type of song and dance man, Tilda Swinton as identical twin newspaper gossip columnists, Ralph Fiennes as an exacting director and Frances McDormand cutting it up in the editing suite. However, the kidnapping story doesn’t quite mesh all the vignettes together to any great satisfaction.

The Hateful Eight

Rated R
My Score: 4 (out of 5)

I will state here and now that the writing and story for Quentin Tarantino’s The Hateful Eight are his best ever. The overall film still isn’t as good as Pulp Fiction or even Django Unchained – in fact some may even be dismayed by how much more emphasis was put on story and dialog than on action in the film – but this is the maturation of Tarantino as writer and filmmaker. Solid performances by Samuel L. Jackson and Jennifer Jason Leigh contribute to the overall enjoyment of the film, but the story and writing are the best features here.

Anomalisa

Rated R
My Score: 2 (out of 5)

Don’t believe the commercials, the film festival laurel branches or the critical raves about the triumph of the human spirit, or something – this stop-motion animation of a mid-life man’s extramarital one-night stand is pointless. And worse, it’s deathly slow. (Slow does not always mean profound!)

I’ve appreciated writer/co-director Charlie Kaufman’s previous mind-benders (Adaptation, Eternal Sunshine of the Spotless Mind) and the way he explores insular men seeking reprieve from loneliness, but there’s little release here, and not a lot of joy beyond a funny opening joke. Mousy Lisa (voiced by Jennifer Jason Leigh) blooms from the attention she gets from a dreary traveling motivational speaker (voiced by David Thewlis), only to have no problem when, after their tryst, he dismisses her; it’s an unconvincing easy out for him, and for Kaufman. The facemasks the puppets wear seem a bit haunting, so there’s that. And one bit of cleverness, too – all the characters, including the women, are voiced by men, until Lisa (Leigh) comes onto the scene. It’s a nice touch, but one of the only few.

My Score: 5 (out of 5)

This companion novel inspired by the videogame Star Wars: Battlefront tells the story of soldiers from the 61st Mobile Infantry known as Twilight Company battle Stormtroopers in the ultimate galactic war between good and evil. When it looks like the Twilight Company is about to lose the battle, an ally helps the Rebel Alliance fight the battle against the Empire.

Dengeki Bunko: Fighting Climax

Rated T for Teen
For PlayStation 3, PlayStation Vita
My Score: 4(out of 5)

I am a huge fan of ASCII Media Works’ Dengeki Bunko imprint of books and manga. To celebrate the 20th anniversary of the imprint, the company teamed with game designers Ecole Software and French Bread and publisher Sega to create the fighting game Dengeki Bunko: Fighting Climax – a fighting game that features some of the more popular characters in the Dengeki Bunko line as the main combatants. Slick and simplified controls makes this game easy to get into, though I imagine the more hardcore fighting game fans out there might take issue with how easy it is to breeze through the game.

Zoo

Hello, Hippos!

Zoo introduces Hippo Encounter, a new area where guests can get up close to the big animals.

What’s it like to be up close to a hippo? Have you ever wondered how their skin feels? Or what they eat for lunch? Why they spend so much time in the water? How fast they run? Are they endangered? Guests can find out at the Zoo’s new Hippo Encounter, a hands-on opportunity every weekend and holiday at noon at the L.A. Zoo and Botanical Gardens.

Small groups of up to 15 people, including children ages four and up accompanied by an adult, can go behind the scenes for approximately 20 minutes to stand very close to the Zoo’s near-legendary, 15-month old baby, Rosie, and her mom, Mara, while learning all about them. L.A. Zoo keepers introduce guests to both hippos, the third-largest land mammal, and share specifics about their daily routines, care, training and lives. Participants watch up close as staff feeds lunch to the hippos, followed by a chance to reach out and feel their cool, smooth skin, then concluding with a photo op. Due to the great popularity of this unique experience, purchase of Hippo Encounter tickets ($15 per person in addition to regular Zoo admission) is suggested in advance via the L.A. Zoo’s Website.

Admission to the Los Angeles Zoo is $20 for general admission (ages 13 to 61); $17 for seniors (ages 62+), and $15 for children (ages 2 to 12). No ticket is required for children under 2. Admission for Greater Los Angeles Zoo Association members is free. Hippo Encounter tickets are $15 per person in addition to regular Zoo admission and available to adults and children ages four and up accompanied by an adult. Tickets for the Hippo Encounter are available online at <http://www.lazoo.org/visit/showsandactivities/> and in person at admissions ticket windows; Greater Los Angeles Zoo members may purchase tickets at admissions window 11.

The Los Angeles Zoo is in Griffith Park at the junction of the Ventura (134) and Golden State (5) freeways. 5333 Zoo Drive, Los Angeles, CA 90027. Free parking is available. Information: (323) 644-6001, or lazoo.org.

The Year of These Monkeys

L.A. Zoo Francois' Langur Family

Zoo celebrated Lunar New Year with focus on monkey species.

The Los Angeles Zoo celebrated the Lunar New Year Feb. 8 by inviting guests to visit its diverse collection of monkey species from around the world. Guests viewed the curious, innovative and mischievous animals that make up one of the 12 animal species that appear in the Chinese Zodiac. Perhaps the most heartwarming and inspiring group of monkeys that reside at the L.A. Zoo is a newly blended Francois' langur family, which came together after a long journey to reunite an infant monkey named Tao with his troop after a dramatic birth. Deemed a "miracle baby" by his animal keepers, the slender monkey with orange and black fur, a long tail, and striking eyes was born last Aug. 15 but tragically lost his mother during childbirth.

Animal Keeper Stephanie Zielinski found the newborn Francois' langur in the troop's holding area the morning after his evening birth. Seeing that his mother had passed away and he was in need of immediate care, she quickly placed an emergency call to the Zoo's veterinary team and began warming the baby. Animal care and veterinarian staff needed to stabilize the baby and make some very important decisions regarding his future within the troop with his mother being gone.

The thriving baby spent a month in the Zoo's nursery until he was strong enough to begin the lengthy process of rejoining the troop. "The goal is always to get primate infants back to their mothers as soon as possible," Zielinski said. "Ultimately this allows for a much greater chance at a successful integration and life back into the troop. The major challenge here is that we lost Tao's mother, so we had to see if the other female would take Tao on as her own."

Animal care staff was confident that resident female Mei-Chi would endear to baby Tao as she is gentle in nature and has been a mother to two infants before coming to live at the L.A. Zoo in 2009. Staff fed Tao his bottles while simultaneously getting the rest of the troop used to Tao's presence in the near vicinity. After this process yielded encouraging results, animal care staff began allowing protected contact with Mei-Chi, encouraging her to touch and groom Tao for brief amounts of time. But, as Francois' langur infants often nurse from their mothers for close to a year and Mei-Chi would have no milk to nurse, it was vital for animal care staff to teach Mei-Chi how to bring Tao up to the fence so that animal care staff could feed Tao his bottles throughout the day. Both Mei-Chi and Tao progressed quickly in learning the new process, and at two months old Tao was given full contact with Mei-Chi behind the scenes.

L.A. Zoo Francois' Langur Tao and Mei-Chi.

L.A. Zoo Francois' Langur Tao.

"It was clear at this point Tao was pulling away from our care giving and was ready to be with new mother Mei-Chi full time," Zielinski said. "It has been beautiful to watch their bond grow strong and very real. This has been one of the biggest challenges of my 21-year career as an animal keeper here at the Los Angeles Zoo, and it's so gratifying to see this unique situation turning out exactly as we hoped it would for this miracle baby and his surrogate mother."

To add to the already delicate process, another female named Vicki Vale arrived from the Memphis Zoo last November 2015 and was introduced to Tao as well. It is common for this species of primate to share the care of raising infants, and Vicki Vale naturally began passing Tao back and forth with surrogate mother Mei-Chi and participated in a cooperative strategy for raising Tao. The final step was introducing the father Francois' langur, Paak, back into the group. He had been kept in a separate but adjacent space from the others so the female's bonds could deepen with Tao while still allowing him to observe the group. Paak took to infant Tao nicely, and the group became a blended family, coming together after a delicate five month introduction process due in part to the hard work of the dedicated animal care staff.

Francois' langurs are a slender black monkey with long tails that can be found in the wild in southern China and northeastern Vietnam. They split their time between the trees and the ground while eating a diet consisting primarily of shoots, fruits, flowers, and bark. Francois' langurs are currently listed as endangered on the International Union of Conservation of Nature Red List due to deforestation and being hunted for use in traditional Asian medicines on the black market.

Guests can now view infant Tao, Mei-Chi, Vicki Vale, and Paak in their habitat next to Tiger Plaza daily, weather permitting.

The Los Angeles Zoo and Botanical Gardens is in Griffith Park at the junction of the Ventura (134) and Golden State (5) freeways. Admission is $20 for adults and $15 for children ages 2 to 12. The Zoo is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily. For information, call (323) 644-4200 or visit the L.A. Zoo Website at lazoo.org.

Rest Insured

Do You Need Gap Insurance?

We get this question frequently. If you are getting a new car, or recently did, you may want to read about this important coverage.

Though it may sound trivial, gap insurance is a must for people who lease their cars. And if you made a small down payment when buying a car, a gap policy can be lifesaver as well. But first, let's look at why it exists.

As the name implies, gap insurance covers what traditional auto insurance doesn't. In other words, it closes the gap between what your insurance company pays if your car is stolen or totaled and what you owe the finance company.

Let's take a test case: Say you bought your car two months ago for $25,000. You begin making payments at about $500 a month based on a six percent interest rate. Then, disaster strikes: A tree falls on your car and flattens it.

You call the insurance company and it looks into its crystal ball and decides at the time of the accident your car was worth only $20,000. The car may be only a couple of months old, but it has already lost 20 percent of its value. Unfortunately, the finance company still wants the full amount you owe them. With interest, tax and license fees, they figure that to be $27,000.

Yikes! There's a gap of $7,000 between the $20,000 that the insurance company is willing to pay you and the $27,000 the finance company is demanding. Most folks are going to be eating Spam dinners for the next two years, but if you have gap insurance you can safely order steak.

Apply the same scenario to someone who bought their car. If they left the dealer lot without putting several thousand dollars down, they likely owe more than the insurance company will pay if the vehicle gets totaled or stolen in the first few years. Once again, gap coverage can save the day.

And that's why gap insurance is a must for many drivers. In fact, gap insurance is usually mandated by lease contracts or included within them. If a gap policy is required but not included in your contract, you should shop around for this coverage (insurance companies sell it). If gap coverage is included in the lease, check to see how much is offered and how much you're going to be paying for it. (In some cases, lease contracts may include what is known as a gap waiver, which protects you from gap charges in the event that the leased vehicle is declared a total loss — eliminating the need for a gap policy.)

Is gap insurance necessary for people who finance their cars? Well, it depends on your coverage. If your regular insurance policy is written to pay off the fully financed amount, then you don't need gap insurance.

Here are a few things to keep in mind when buying gap insurance:

- Although most people purchase it when a lease is initiated, some insurance companies will sell you a gap policy anytime during the lease term.
- You must be in compliance with all terms of the lease.
- Your gap insurance policy may not be honored if you don't have collision and comprehensive insurance coverage. Further, lease contracts generally require that you carry collision and comprehensive at all times.
- If your car is totaled or stolen, carefully follow all requirements made by your insurance company. For example, some companies require you to continue making loan payments on your totaled car until the money from the gap insurance is paid out.

So when initiating a car loan or lease, always remember to ask your insurance agent about gap insurance. If you have an accident, you'll be glad you planned ahead.

Tastes of Ireland

DIRECTIONS: Irish Stuffed Mushrooms

Have your ingredients ready for dicing.

Remove the stems of each mushroom and dice them with the onion, parsley, Canadian bacon and minced garlic.

Add olive oil in a large pot on medium heat. Place Canadian bacon, garlic, onion, parsley, thyme, salt and pepper and cook until the Canadian bacon is sautéed thoroughly.

Add bread crumbs and water. Mix.

Place stuffing mixture on top of each mushroom. Add a slice of Dubliner cheese. Place stuffed mushrooms in the oven for 30 minutes at 350 degrees Fahrenheit.

St. Patrick's Day is around the corner, and aside from green beverages and the great St. Patrick's Day Parade we all know and love here in Downtown Los Angeles, I decided to share two Irish dishes, Irish Stuffed Mushrooms and Colcannon.

The ingredients used are not quite what the great people of Ireland might use, but it's pretty close in texture and flavor. For example, ham and bacon are more traditional ingredients than the Canadian bacon I used, and the Irish would use butter instead of olive oil. Colcannon is a traditional dish, and I've seen a variety of ingredients in making this dish, all of which taste amazing. Happy St. Patrick's Day!

Warning:
This is heavenly delicious!

Irish Stuffed Mushrooms³

INGREDIENTS:

- 6 medium-sized Portabella mushrooms
- 1 yellow or white onion
- 1 bunch parsley
- 1 tablespoon fresh thyme
- 1/2 cup diced Canadian bacon (or ham)
- 2 cloves garlic
- Salt and pepper to taste
- 1 cup bread crumbs
- 1/4 to 1/2 cup water
- 1/4 cup extra virgin olive oil
- 6 slices Irish Dubliner cheese (you may substitute a cheese of your choice)

Colcannon

INGREDIENTS:

- 1 whole cabbage, shredded
- 6 medium-sized russet or Yukon potatoes
- 2 scallions, diced
- 2 leeks, diced
- Milk, 1/2 to 1 cup
- 2 tablespoons unsalted butter
- 1/2 cup bacon, diced
- 1/2 cup Canadian bacon or ham, diced
- Salt and pepper to taste

[A Cook's Dictionary]

Colcannon:

A delicious Irish peasant dish of milk and butter-moistened mashed potatoes, mixed with finely chopped onions and cabbage.

– From the The New Food Lover's Companion, Sharon Tyler Herbst, 1995, Barron's Educational Series.

DIRECTIONS: Colcannon

Have your potatoes, scallions, cabbage, leeks and Canadian bacon ready. Place all potatoes in a large pot and fill with water. Cover with lid and let cook until tender on medium heat.

Place shredded cabbage in a large pot with water and let cook until tender.

Use a fork to poke a potato to see how soft it is. If there's no resistance, it's done, and strain water from pot. Use fork to mash potatoes. Add the milk and butter here.

Sauté the Canadian bacon (or ham) and regular bacon until golden brown; add scallions, leeks, salt and pepper. Cook through. Then add those mixed ingredients and the cabbage (strained) to the mashed potatoes.

Know Your Tier

For current City employees: New ordinance creates new tier, amends earlier tier for retirement benefits.

The City Council has given initial approval to an ordinance that will create a new tier (Tier 3) of retirement benefits for Active LACERS Members hired on or after Feb. 21, 2016. The ordinance will transfer Tier 2 members (persons hired on or after July 1, 2013) into Tier 1.

Here's how it works:

Active Member Benefits: Retirement Formulas

Tier 1

Retirement allowance may not exceed 100 percent of final compensation.

Normal Retirement:

- 2.16 percent times 12-month final average compensation times years of service credit

Early Retirement:

- 2.16 percent times 12-month final average compensation times years of service credit times early retirement adjustment factor

Tier 3

Retirement allowance may not exceed 80 percent of final compensation.

Normal Retirement:

- Age 60 or older and 10 years of service (5 years must be continuous service): 1.5 percent times 36-month final average compensation times years of service credit
- Age 60 or older and 30 years of service (5 years must be continuous service): 2 percent times 36-month final average compensation times years of service credit

Enhanced Retirement:

- Age 63 and 10 years of service (5 years must be continuous service): 2 percent times 36-month final average compensation times years of service credit
- Age 63 and 30 years of service (5 years must be continuous service): 2.1 percent times 36-month final average compensation times years of service credit

Early Retirement:

- Any age prior to age 60 and 30 years of service (5 years must be continuous service): 2 percent times 36-month final average compensation times years of service credit times early retirement adjustment factor*

* If the Member is age 55 or older at the date of retirement, his/her allowance shall not be subject to reduction on account of age. If the Member is younger than age 55 at the date of retirement, a reduction factor shall be applied under LAAC Sec. 4.1080.7(c).

LAFD, LAPD

Life Shavers

It's time for St. Baldrick's! FS 89 will be used for the head-shaving fundraiser against childhood cancers.

March 12, 2016

On Sat., March 12, LAFD and LAPD personnel, and other City Employees, too, will participate in their 13th annual combined St. Baldrick's fundraising event. Participants, or "shavees" as they are known, collect pledges from friends and family in exchange for shaving their heads. The bald heads signify solidarity with child victims of cancer, who often lose their hair while undergoing treatment. All money raised goes to the St. Baldrick's Foundation and is distributed to doctors and other researchers on the front lines of the war on childhood cancer.

This year's location is again Fire Station 89, 7063 Laurel Canyon Blvd. in North Hollywood. The event is set to begin at 7:30 a.m. and runs to 2 p.m.

The event features a silent auction, a raffle, a free Pancake Factory breakfast, blood and marrow drives, face painters, balloon artists, free kids' toys and entertainment, and more. And fire and police apparatus are expected to be present for children to explore and for photo opportunities.

Participants and helpers are needed to staff this event. If you are able to help, please contact Lt. Greg Doyle at (818) 634-6127; or Firefighter Danny Wu at (626) 590-6240. If you would like to be a "shavee" or you are interested in pledging, you can sign up at <http://www.stbaldricks.org/events/LAFDLAPD>
